A possible new Northside greenway

Open Streets/Harvest Fest

By Sarah Stewart

n October 16 the City of Minneapolis held an open house at Folwell Park to gather input on plans to convert a low-traffic street in North Minneapolis into a beautiful, safe, accessible route for bicyclists and pedestrians. Approximately 100 community members dropped in to give input on the greenway's route, design and amenities. Now in the earliest planning stages, the greenway could become a bike boulevard (shared between bikes and cars but with traffic calming features), a full greenway with no motorized traffic, or a "half and half" with both a trail and car traffic. The greenway could increase green space and allow for amenities such as community gardens, playgrounds, barbecues and public art.

Open house attendees completed surveys to share their feedback. Survey results showed that 92 percent of attendees live in North Minneapolis, and 84 percent live within four blocks of a proposed greenway route. The City is continuing to gather feedback through an online survey and will report the full results of the open house and the online survey in November.

Community members who were not able to attend the open house can still give feedback at www.surveymonkey.com/s/NMplsGreenway until October 30. More info about the greenway project is available at www.minneapolismn.gov/health/ship/northminneapolisgreenway.

The bikeway will be the second of its kind in North Minneapolis. Examples for comparison include 37th Ave. between Queen and Knox Aves., Milwaukee Ave. in Seward neighborhood and the Midtown Greenway.

The greenway would be a north-south route starting at Victory Memorial Parkway on the north and passing Crystal Lake Cemetery, Folwell Park and North Commons Park. The community open house featured the different route options.

The greenway steering committee will meet on October 30 to review the results of the open house and the online survey. They will also review results of a traffic study conducted by the consultant for this project (SRF Greenway continued on page 12

People walked, biked and rolled on Lowry Avenue on September 29 for the 4th Annual Harvest Fest, which was joined with Open Streets this year. Lowry was closed to car traffic so neighbors could meander safely among 14 different zones over 24 blocks for music, art, kids' games, food, community info displays and bike activities for all ages. Who lives in Camden?

By Douglas Fehlen

Residents of Camden know that we are fortunate to live in a vibrant, dynamic community—an overlooked treasure of Minneapolis and the Twin Cities metro area. Our neighborhoods offer the best of city living with access to great local businesses and dynamic cultural organizations. High quality of life amenities include excellent parks, libraries, schools, and community gardens.

But most important, our community is its people we who meet and connect with each other in front lawns, places of worship, and public spaces. But just who lives in Camden?

The seven neighborhoods that comprise Camden feature a wide range of individuals and families, working professionals and homemakers, young children and retired seniors. Additionally, Camden has the distinction of being one of the most racially and ethnically diverse communities in Minneapolis. Following are some highlights of recent demographic data.

• Camden's population of 28,778 represents roughly 7.5 percent of the total number of Minneapolis residents.

• Close to two-thirds (63.7 percent) of Camdenites are from the 18–64 age demographic. Children make up about 29 percent of the community and those 65 and older represent 7 percent of its residents.

The Camden community is more racially and ethnically diverse than Minneapolis as a whole. A plurality of residents is white (42.6 percent), but large numbers of us are Black/African American (32.8 percent), Asian/Pacific Islander (10.5 percent), and Hispanic/Latino (7.2 percent). As a point of comparison, 60.3 percent of Minneapolis residents are white.
Slightly more women (51.2 percent) than men (48.8 percent) live in the community. This is in modest contrast to the overall population of Minneapolis, which has slightly more men (50.3 percent) than women (49.7 percent).

• While high quality of life factors are constantly bringing new people to our neighborhoods, many in the Camden community have lived in the area for long periods of time. About 21 percent have lived in their homes for more than 20 years. An additional 56 percent have been in the community for more than five years. When people come to Camden, they want to stay.

• Camdenites on average have a high level of educational attainment. About 83 percent of individuals have graduated from high school. Nearly a quarter (23.7 percent) have earned a bachelor's degree or a higher level of college achievement.

• The community consists largely of owner-occupied homes, but there is also a strong rental market. About 70 percent of residents own their homes while 30 percent are renters.

• Camden is a great community for families. Roughly 60 percent of the households here include families. Our neighborhoods also have a lot of appeal for those who live alone or with non-family members (40 percent of households).

• Roughly one-third of Camdenites (35.1 percent) are employed in Minneapolis. Others commute to nearby cities that include St. Paul (7.9 percent), Bloomington (3.7 percent), St. Louis Park (3.6 percent), and Plymouth (3.5 percent).

Of course, numbers and statistics do not tell the

A pilot program to reduce pollution is looking for Minneapolis businesses to sign up for free energy efficiency assessments. Commer-

The assessments put knowledge in consumers' hands to help them make decisions that will save them money. The City is working with the Retiree Environmental Technical Assistance Program in a partnership called Green Business Benchmarking to help businesses use less energy and save money. The reports allow owners to monitor their energy use from year to year and to learn how to reduce energy, water and waste. The participating organization pays nothing for the assessment, and there are no regulatory requirements involved. Info: MPLSefficiency@minneapolis mn.gov.

How natural is the natural swimming pool?

In regards to the proposed Webber Park natural swimming pool that was written about in the September Camden News we got the following questions from Webber Camden resident Mark Tarnowski; and we decided to get some answers for the curious public.

Tarnowski asks: I am curious. What will prevent the users of the pool from having to swim with muskrats? Will there be a big fence around it? What will keep out the geese? Won't they be attracted to a natural swimming pool? They'd have no difficulty flying over a fence.

Jennifer Ringold, Manager of Public Engagement and Citywide Planning, Minneapolis Park & Recreation Board answers: The Natural Swimming Pool being proposed for Webber Park will be surrounded with a fence that will effectively keep muskrats and other critters away from the system, however the primary deterrent will actually be the way that the pool is constructed.

A natural granite stone paver beach entry will surround much of the pool and the rest of it will have a natural granite stone edging. Behind the tough PVC membrane that makes the entire system water tight, will be concrete walls.

This is a system that will not allow for "swimming with muskrats" and even geese are not attracted to a facility like this because of the considerable human activity - and they're uncomfortable in the space because they have no protection.

Thanks to the Camden Community for their support

As an openly gay man I take comfort in knowing that so many of you in the Camden Community will be supporting the gay community by voting "no" on the upcoming ballot measure to limit marriage to one man and one woman. I have noticed a sea of bright orange signs everywhere supporting "Vote No" on this issue. Knowing your strong support and having experienced your friendliness has keep me a Northsider for over 15 years. At many times I have thought how easy it would be for me to just move elsewhere…but the strong sense of community and friends I have made would make it very difficult to do so.

Many of you have recognized that having a large G/L/B/T community living on the Northside is a sign that good things are happening. The overall public tends to perceive that where there is a large contingent of G/L/B/T people in a neighborhood that this is a desirable place to live. I certainly do. Kurt Lawrason,

Take a book, leave a book

By Buzzy Bohn

When the Minneapolis Public Schools opened their new John B. Davis Education and Service Center at 1250 W. Broadway, they also opened a new, much smaller building. A Little Free Library was built on the grounds of the new headquarters near the Northwest corner of the building. Little Free Libraries are a way to promote literacy and a love of reading on a very local scale, as well as building a sense of community. They are run on a volunteer basis, with a "take a book — leave a book" philosophy. They are sometimes near businesses or organizations and sometimes near individual homes. These Little Free Libraries are not meant to replace our public North Regional and Webber Park libraries, but are a way to compliment them.

Little Free Libraries have been popping up around North Minneapolis. The following are some of the sites where Little Free Libraries can be found. Northside Little Free Library sites: 1250 W. Broadway (MPS head-quarters); 1200 Plymouth; 2001 Plymouth (U of M Urban Research and Outreach Center); 3745 Dupont; 4600 Penn; 3914 Washburn; 3735 Washburn; 1250 West Broadway; 25th and Girard; and 2100 Plymouth (Home-wood studios).

Vote "no"

As we prepare to go to the polls to make important decisions about marriage and family, we appreciate the opportunity to tell you the story of our family.

We got to know each other working at camp. One day, venturing out in a canoe, we found ourselves drifting rather than paddling. We talked for hours. We felt as though we had known each other our whole lives. As time went on, the intensity of our friendship surprised us.

We are people of faith. Both of us were raised in the church. Both of us attended seminary and have gone on to be ordained and serve as pastors here in the Twin Cities.

Falling in love was a wonderful and terrifying experience. We wrestled with questions about God, marriage and family. In the end, we realized that our love, like all love, is a gift from God. God has created us just as we are, and God made us for each other.

We made promises to share love and commitment for a lifetime. We brought our friends and families together so that we could publicly affirm those promises in a service of worship. Our marriage only continues to grow and deepen after 12 years.

After years of preparing and waiting and hoping, our daughter's birthmother chose us to parent her baby. We met our daughter at the hospital when she was two hours old. At three, she is our joy each and every day.

Our family, created through loving commitment, is a gift from God and a gift to our community. By the lives that we lead, we teach our daughter daily what it means to follow Jesus, loving God and neighbor.

We hope that you, as our neighbors, will choose to honor and protect the gift of families like ours. Join us in voting "no" on the marriage amendment.

Rev. Jane McBride and Rev. Jen Nagel, McKinley

I hope that voters will reject both the amendments on November 6 proposed for the Minnesota Constitution. While both have some merit, neither are stuff for our state constitution. They need more flexibility for improvements as we live and learn, and these two proposals, for voter photo ID and marriage, were too hastily rushed past the governor's veto and onto this ballot.

For decades Minnesota law already, and in effect, defines marriage as between one man and one woman, and authorizes the counties to issue licenses to couples allowing them to have their marriage solemnized in Minnesota. Wouldn't it only be fair if the state legislature would also license the "spouses" in a civil union, allowing this union to be between one man and one woman or between two women or between two men, and to establish their legal protections and responsibilities in a fair and equal standard as for marriage?

I hope each of you will vote on November 6 with your informed and educated consciences.

John Bispala, Webber-Camden

Think about a drought-resistant garden

By Debbie Nelson, Master Gardener, University of Minnesota Extension Service Hennepin County

The fall colors have been spectacular in spite of the drought. The maples are blazing red and orange, and the ash and elm are a golden yellow. Part of this may be attributed to people following the advice to keep the trees watered, but some of it may be due to the fact that some trees are more drought tolerant than others, much like the plants in our yards and gardens.

According to meteorologists Paul Douglas and Dr. Mark Seely, drought may be more of an emerging trend in Minnesota rather than an occasional aberration; severe drought has been observed somewhere in Minnesota every summer since 2005. If drought is to be more of the norm than the exception, it may be time to rethink the plants we grow in our gardens. I know that my water bills have been the highest ever with all of the watering I have done and if drought becomes more common, we may be faced with watering bans as our water resources diminish, leaving us without the resources needed to support the lush green lawns and hybrid tea roses.

We should be clear that we are not talking about cacti here. There are many plants, native and nonnatives, that we already use in our gardens and that are rich and colorful contributors to our landscape. Technically speaking drought tolerant plants are those that survive for three or more years with little or no supplementary watering. Many of them actually perform poorly with excessive watering or during periods of high humidity. This includes perennials such as aster, blackeyed susan, bearded iris, grey headed coneflower, butterfly weed, daylily, hosta, Little Blue Stem (grass), peonies, primrose, Russian sage, salvia and common varrow.

What makes these and other plants and trees more drought tolerant? The fact that they extend their roots deep into the soil where they can tap into the lower depths of the water table. While the root system of Kentucky Blue grass is generally 3 to 4 inches deep, the roots of Little Blue Stem and Pale Purple Coneflower can reach to 6 or 7 feet or more! In some cases the unique leaf structures of the plants also help to reduce water loss through transpiration.

Of course the ability of the plants to send down theses deep roots is dependent on the soil – it must be loose and drain well so that the roots can grow to the deep depths. Before planting you should amend your soil up to 12 inches deep to make sure it will drain well. You can do this by digging up the soil and adding organic material such as compost or shredded leaves at a ratio of 1 part organics to 4 parts soil; so for 12 inches you would need to add 3 inches of organic material. Even though the plants are drought tolerant they will need supplemental watering until they are well established as their roots systems are relatively short when they are young. Water deeply and infrequently to encourage the roots to grow deeply in search of water. Mulch around the plant with organic mulch such as wood chips, shredded bark or leaves to prevent the water from evaporating.

The drought tolerant plants mentioned above will thrive in full sun. It is a little more difficult, however to grow plants that require less water in shady spots, especially under trees. A few plants that you might find success with would be columbine, periwinkle, fox glove, cranesbill geraniums and even daffodils. And as we mentioned there are trees which are more drought tolerant than others, including silver maple, common hackberry, green ash, eastern cottonwood, bur oak and American elm.

An added benefit to drought tolerant plants is that their foliage and seed heads over-winter quite well, adding seasonal interest to the landscape and offering food for the birds. The plants will also trap snow on the leaves and stems which serves as an insulator protecting the crown of the plant from the bitter cold temperatures of the winter.

As our climate continues to change, it is becoming more and more apparent that we will have to adapt our yard and gardens and gardening practices to these changes. It will be a challenge for us all.

Where have all the turtles gone?

By Carol McElroy, Interpretive Naturalist, Kroening Interpretive Center

It's November, and there are no turtles to be seen. We know turtles are not active in the winter, but where did they go? When cold winter winds bring frigid air, ponds and rivers form an icy crust. As temperatures drop, the ice on a body of water gets thicker, leaving little or no water. Shallow ponds may freeze completely.

Most Minnesota turtles are aquatic, spending summers swimming and feeding in the water. Some turtles-such as snapping turtles and painted turtles-must be under water just to eat! When winter comes, they hibernate in the lakes and rivers where they live. Turtles are reptiles and cannot regulate body temperature as birds and mammals do. Their internal temperature matches that of their surroundings.

These animals have acquired some interesting adaptations to survive the winter. Turtles burrow into the sandy or muddy bottoms of rivers and lakes to hibernate. Although metabolism slows dramatically during hibernation, these animals still require oxygen to breathe. The turtles have a special adaptation that allows them to obtain dissolved oxygen from the water through their cloaca (located by the tail).

There are nine species of turtles in Minnesota. Although their wintering habits differ somewhat, all turtles hibernate in the bottoms of frozen bodies of water. Snapping turtles will seek out areas below the ice, finding muskrat tunnels or openings in riverbanks. They will often congregate in groups to hibernate. Better adapted to cold water, snappers can occasionally be seen swimming in open water under the ice.

Blanding's turtles and wood turtles are both considered threatened and listed on the Endangered Species List for Minnesota. The wood turtle lives in river floodplains, and Blanding's turtles prefer ponds and marshes. Although much of their warm weather habitat is out of water, both will still seek protection under ice in rivers and ponds for the winter.

Young hatchlings of some species, such as the common map turtle and painted turtle, will spend the winter months hibernating underground in the nest and emerge in the spring as babies, ready to make the trek to a nearby pond.

Although all turtles can be said to hibernate, behaviors vary. As we observe turtles, we can witness adaptation in process. These variations in species help individual animals survive. And that, after all, is the name of the game.

The bridge closed in October 2010 after inspectors found significant deterioration in concrete and cables inside the bridge's box girders. Crews began fixing that damage this past summer. That work has now reached a point where the remaining construction can be done while the bridge is open to vehicle, bicycle and pedestrian traffic.

Although the bridge is open there will be lane restrictions in place. Traffic will be reduced to one lane in each direction, and it will remain that way until this season's construction wraps up in late November. All lanes on the bridge will then open to traffic through the winter. When construction resumes in April 2013, lane restrictions will be back in place until the final repairs are completed at the end of the summer.

The Plymouth Avenue Bridge opened in 1982, and before its closure, it carried more than 14,000 vehicles a day. For more info go to www.minneapolismn.gov/cip/all/WCMS1P-080733.

Cold weather pet tips

By Kelly Benning, DVM

The cold weather is upon us. And so are the increased risks to our pets. Some products for winter survival can actually be harmful to your pet. As you begin to winterize your houses and cars, keep these safety tips for pets in mind.

Antifreeze—One of the most deadly products out there. Ethylene glycol is the main ingredient found in antifreeze, hydraulic brake fluid and de-icers. It has a sweet taste to it (do not try it yourself!) which pets seem to like. The trouble is it is highly toxic and will kill your pet within 24-72 hours of exposure. Even the smallest amount should be taken very seriously. The ethylene glycol wreaks havoc on the kidneys, causing acute kidney failure. Symptoms (drunk-like walk, vomiting, depression, seizures, increased drinking and/or urination) may be classic signs of antifreeze exposure. This is an emergency and you need to get your dog or cat help right away. Do not wait! A few hours can be the difference between life and death.

Rodenticide—Just like us, rats and mice want to come inside from the cold. That means your house. People see mice and rats and immediately think to get some rat poison. If you have any pets in the house, think about other methods besides the poison (traps, sticky paper, etc). When people tell me that the rodenticide is hidden, and their pet can't get to it, I think about all the cases where I have heard that then discovered that their pet ate a mouse found in the house. Guess what? That mouse had just eaten the rat poison, now so did the dog. Rodenticides are anticoagulants, which slow the clotting of blood, causing internal bleeding and potentially death.

Sidewalk salt—This safety product can not only cause irritation to the paws but if a dog eats or licks a lot of it, they can develop some serious symptoms. In small amounts, pets can exhibit drooling and diarrhea. In larger amounts, pets may show excessive thirst, weakness or fainting due to low blood pressure, decreased muscle function or even seizures, coma or death. There are several products out there labeled for paw safety. Keep in mind, though, ingestion of any sidewalk salts can be harmful.

The environment—Luckily, most pets have a coat that keeps their body warm. However, in severe cold conditions, even the furriest of the furry can develop hypothermia. Use booties, dog blankets or jackets to keep them warm and protected. Always bring your outside dog inside during the really cold times. Provide plenty of water and food to increase their natural ability to stay warm. Older and arthritic pets need warm beds and quick exposure to the elements. Be careful about letting your dog on the frozen lakes. Aside from falling through the ice, the ice itself can cut their paws!

Another good tip is to make sure your pet is microchipped and has an ID tag. Pets can get disoriented in the cold weather, especially if there is a winter storm. It will be the surest way to make sure your pet returns home to you safe and sound!

Reduce your gym membership fees, help your neighbor

Save money, get in shape, and help your neighbor! Develop strong muscles by shoveling the snow off a grateful senior citizen's walkways and driveway. Adopt a yard until the weather warms. Resident will provide the warm smile. Perfect opportunity for apartment/condo dweller who yearns to be outside. Work with a partner and you can take turns shoveling. Family teams and small groups welcome; youth must be age 7 and older and supervised by an adult.

Exact location TBD, depends upon where the senior citizen resides. One-time opportunities are also available. Contact Jeanne the NIP Seniors Program, Volunteer Coordinator at srvolunteer@neighborhoodinvolve.org or 612-746-8549 for info; www.neighborhoodinvolve.org.

> Watch City's 2012 Budget Hearings on TV and on the web As part of the City Council's process of considering Mayor R.T. Rybak's recommended 2013 budget for the City of Minneapolis, Council Members are now holding a series of budget hearings where they hear directly from City departments about how the budget proposal will impact their operations. Camden Lions, serving the community, and spaghetti!

It is fall again, and the Camden Lions are gearing up for their third annual Spaghetti Dinner. On November 7, the Lions will transform the gymnasium at Sojouner Truth Academy into a cafeteria serving, salad, garlic bread, spaghetti, and homemade desserts. This effort is one of the yearly fundraisers for the Camden Lions Community Fund.

"This is one of our best fundraisers for us," said Camden Lions President, Chris Lettermann. "This is our third annual dinner. We use the money raised to help our community, including tornado relief last year, youth programs in the city and helping those without means to see and hear."

Restarted in 2002, the Camden Lions have since worked long and hard in the community. They have supported people in need for vision services both locally and internationally. Local Minneapolis park recreation basketball teams have benefited from the Camden Lions fund.

Last year, in the wake of the tornado that tore through North Minneapolis, the Camden Lions found themselves on the leading edge of disaster recovery. They received $10,000 from the charitable arm of the Lions Club International Foundation. This money went into immediate direct aid to the residents of North Minneapolis. Donations then started to pour in from other Lions Clubs across Minnesota and Canada. Over $15,000 went into the community to get people back into their homes and help stabilize the neighborhood.

The Spaghetti Dinner Fundraiser will be served from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at Sojouner Truth Academy, 3820 Emerson Ave. N. Tickets are $7 each or five tickets for $25 and can be purchased at the door or at the Goddess of Glass and Friends. The Goddess of Glass is located at 2205 Lowry N. In November, the store will be open Wednesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Saturdays and Sundays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Camden Lions are part of Lions Club International, the largest and most effective service organization in the world. Globally, it has 46,000 clubs and 1.35 million members. Locally, the Camden Lions has over 40 members who work in the community. Our members support students in leadership development, residents after tornado damage, persons with vision and hearing needs, and other organizations in their efYou are cordially invited to a reception to honor

Behind the Victory Flagpole – so many Swedes

By guest writer Gladys Vinje Wells

If there is one person in the Twin Cities who knows about the Swedish population living here, it is Anne Gillespie Lewis. She not only wrote a book about it, but personally had many Swedish friends and neighbors. The name of her book, So Far Away in the World, Stories from the Swedish Twin Cities, was written in 2002 and contains eight chapters of good Swedish reading. This story is taken from chapter one.

Anne related that in 1905 over 126,000 Swedes lived in Minnesota, almost one-third residing in the Twin Cities. Fifteen years later, the Swedish-born population was still the largest immigrant group in both Minneapolis and St. Paul. It can be safely said that the Twin Cities is the metropolitan area where the most Swedish-American visibility still exists.

Lewis grew up in Camden, on the far Northside of Minneapolis, close enough to the west bank of the Mississippi so that many people got bats in their houses in summer they blamed the bats on the nearness of the river. She said that Camden was one of the many "Swede towns" that drew immigrants from Sweden. Another area was called "Swede Hollow," on the east side of St. Paul, but the first pockets of Swedish settlements were along Washington and Cedar Aves. in Seven-Corners. From there the Swedes spread south, southwest and north, drawn to the Camden area by work. A Swedish immigrant with the unlikely name of C. A. Smith had a sawmill here that hired many immigrant workers.

The men who worked for the mill often lived in the big old boarding houses in the Camden area, one of which was run by Christine Nelson. It was a large, white frame house with a spectacular porch and was located at 4301 Lyndale Ave.

Anne goes on to say that when she was growing up, the Swedish presence was still felt in Camden. They thought it was normal that many of their friends and nearly all of the merchants in the area a few blocks away had Swedish or Norwegian names. There was John Nelson the shoe repair man, Johnson Drug on the corner of Lyndale and 42nd, Herman Johnson the tailor and his partner Berg, and Blomquist the grocer. Up on 42nd and Fremont were Carl Nelson, another grocer, Al Anderson who had the gas station, and the Falk Drugstore, later owned by another Swede, Don Carlson.

By the time she was a kid, there was no Swedish spoken on the streets, just at home by the old-timers and their children. Salem Evangelical Lutheran Church on 42nd and Dupont was the oldest Swedish Lutheran church in Camden. The Swedes didn't disappear—they just blended in to the American fabric. Anne said on her block, bounded by Webber Parkway, 43rd and Dupont and Emerson Aves., the roll call of Swedes or part Swedes was impressive. "We ourselves were a bit Swedish, the Elfstroms were 3/4ths and their mom, Phyllis Johnson Elfstrom was all Swedish. Up a few houses was Harry Johnson, Phyllis' cousin, another Swede. The Storms were part Scandinavian, I think. The Leverentz family was half Swede. Ronnie Lorentzen was another Swedish-Norwegian combination, and I guess the Swedlunds were Swedish, too. Al Anderson, the gas station guyprobably was another one."

Anne went on to tell how all the Swedish kids in her neighborhood spent their summers, and luckily enough for her, the Camden pool was right across the street from her house. "After we were done swimming, if we had a nickel we would line up at the popcorn wagon. Pete Peterson, the popcorn man, painted slogans on his old popcorn truck. The one every Camden kid remembers is, "Smile and the world smiles with you—crab and you crab alone."

In winter, Anne told about how they skated on the Camden Park pond for hours on end. Saturday afternoon they trooped to the Camden Theater for their weekly fix of cowboys and Zorro movies. "We played outside after supper and TV was in its infancy, so the old-fashioned games were played. Some of the favorites were Pom Pom Pullaway, Red Rover, Old Lady Witch and Statues. In summer we played baseball, but I tried to stay in the outfield and hoped nobody would hit one my way."

Going on in time, Anne tells about the Camden area being vastly changed since she grew up in the 1950s and early '60s. "The shopping strip on the northwest corner of the intersection of 42nd and Lyndale has been torn down and a Subway Sandwich Shop and sprawling new home of the doctor's group she had been going to for more than 50 years—Camden Physicians—replaced the old buildings. So now, instead of going to the Camden Theater to watch cowboy movies at the Saturday matinee, I go to the same space to have my doctor check my blood pressure." She says she imagines that all her Swedish friends and neighbors, many who live in the same neighborhood, are doing the same thing!

Note: Anne Gillespie Lewis was born in Minneapolis, grew up in the Camden Community, and studied journalism at the University of Minnesota. She worked as a sports writer for the old Minneapolis Star, then became a freelance writer. She and husband, Stephen, live in Minneapolis.

Camden Youth & Schools

Leaders from across the nation meet to learn about youth violence prevention

The City of Minneapolis hosted a network of city leaders from across the country Oct. 10-12 to discuss best practices in youth violence prevention while highlighting local successes and programs in Minneapolis. The meetings and workshops brought together nearly 60 members from the Oakland-based Prevention Institute's UNITY (Urban Networks to Increase Thriving Youth) network who are all working on youth violence prevention initiatives. The meetings and workshops will take place across the city and include local leadership presentations, site visits and workshops.

The UNITY Network is composed of a growing number of U.S. cities that are committed to preventing violence before it occurs. Launched in 2005 and funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the network takes a public health approach that recognizes that violence is as much a health problem as it is a criminal justice problem. In 2010, members, including Minneapolis, developed a strategy approach called the Urban Agenda, which asserts that violence is preventable and calls for the development of citywide and neighborhood-level plans, grounded in research and informed by communities, to have the greatest impact in achieving violence reduction.

Youth violence is the second leading cause of death for young people between the ages of 10 and 24, according to the Centers for Disease Control. As part of its youth violence prevention efforts, in 2006, the City of Minneapolis declared youth violence to be a public health concern and formally launched the "Blueprint for Action" in 2008 with these four goals: Connect every youth with a trusted adult; intervene at the first sign that youth are at risk for violence; restore youth who have gone down the wrong path; and, unlearn the culture of violence in our community.

Since 2006, the City of Minneapolis has seen some successes in reducing youth violence in the city. For example: The number of juveniles involved in violent crime is down 59 percent; violent crime arrests for juveniles have been reduced by nearly 44 percent; and incidents involving guns and juveniles are down nearly 66 percent.

In addition to these measured successes, the Blueprint has served as a platform for significant systems change and resource allocation in a coordinated manner. Among the achievements:

• SPEAK UP Tip Line – Launched confidential tip line for Minneapolis youth and young adults to call or text in the threat of weapons in the community.

• StreetReach – Engaged youth who exhibited signs of at-risk behavior for violence and other negative situations. Services included mentoring, and providing resources, recreational activities and other positive adult connections during summer months.

• Expanded summer hours at parks – Helped leverage resources to expand hours at parks in nine neighborhoods that were prone to greater levels of violence.

• Leveraged resources – In 2008 and 2009 leveraged $514,000 of Empowerment Zone funds to inie community organizations to support several youth development initiatives including employment opportunities for youth, parent support programs, Youth are Here Buses, and teen pregnancy prevention programs.

• Hospital protocol – Launched a protocol with two Trauma 1-level hospitals to intervene and provide psycho-social assessments within 24 hours to every youth aged 10-24 presenting a violent injury to the emergency room. Patients are then connected with appropriate community-based organizations.

• North4 – Launched a pilot employment program for gang affiliated youth who had trouble gaining employment due to their criminal background. Program helps employ and rehabilitate former offenders interested in making a change in their life.

• Engagement Zones and Center of Excellence – Partnered with the

The news from Henry High

By Tom Murray

Henry High School has the good fortune to host five foreign exchange students for the 2012-13 school year. These students come to us from China, Germany, South Korea, Taiwan, and Tajikstan. All of the students report that they are having a great social and educational experience at Henry. You can read more about each of their transformative journeys to America in the Legacy, Henry's online news journal.

The youngest of those students is a 9th grader, Dae Hong who says he is excited to be in America and making new friends. We asked Dae Hong to tell us about life for him here, 6,240 miles away from home.

How do you like America so far?

I came over here alone, but I'm not homesick, because I'm having fun. I studied English for eight years. When I was in high school I wanted to learn more English and America and Korea are close countries in many ways so I wanted to come here. Who has better food?

I think Korean food is delicious. My favorite food is bulgogi which is beef mixed with soy sauce. My favorite American food is a chicken sandwich or a hamburger. I like a hamburger from Burger King. Tell us about housing in Korea.

I live in a large apartment house that is 28 stories high in a city of 1,000,000 people called Ulsan. Most people in my town live in an apartment house. Only the very rich have their own home.

How is school different at Patrick Henry from your high school in China?

In Korea we go to school from 8-10 p.m. I then get on a city bus and get home at about 10:40 and then I study until midnight. During that time there are only two hours per week when we have time to play a sport. In Korea everything is competitive. The Korean system is intense and Korean kids succeed in schools like Harvard all around the world. My favorite subject in Korea was P.E. In Korea all schools are single sex. I am very happy to study here with young women in my class.

Almost everything is totally different here than Korea, even the climate. Our climate is like California.

Why did you choose Henry?

I chose Henry because here everyone is very nice and friendly and says hello even if they don't know you. What is your favorite TV show? Movie?

I like the show, Numbers. I love American movies. My favorite is Transformers.

What is your favorite subject?

P.E. is my favorite class with Mr. Extrand. It's good.

What will you do when you graduate from high school?

I will go to a university in Korea and will study energy. See Dae Hong's school website at http://www.haksung.hs.kr/.

University of Minnesota to leverage assets at the University for the establishment of a Center and to help implement the Blueprint in target neighborhood.

• Youth Violence Prevention Act of 2009 – Successfully lobbied for the passage of state legislation which declared youth violence a public health issue statewide and created three additional pilot sites in Minnesota to be modeled after the Blueprint.

• Gang Assessment Report – Conducted an assessment of the capacity of organizations to engage and address gang-affiliated youth in four neighborhoods that had the highest rates of violent and gang crime.

• B.U.I.L.D. – Gang prevention and healthy youth development curriculum that is intended to increase street-based outreach focusing on specific high-risk neighborhoods

• Summer 612: An innovative microgrant and campaign program that engages over 1000 youth in the summer to create messages using the arts to address the culture of violence.

Consider adopting LBNA as your designated nonprofit

The Lind-Bohanon Neighborhood Association is a 501c3 nonprofit organization established in 1997. Our mission is to improve and enhance our neighborhood in the areas of housing, business, safety and community involvement. Every donation can make a difference locally! A $25 donation can help provide transportation for four seniors or residents with a disability each month. A $50 or $100 donation could also help provide for programs like Toys for Tots, senior activities, or community-wide events like Camden Winterfest. As this year draws to a close the funds you donate will stay local and will help continue the valuable work of LBNA to improve our community. Thank you! To donate today go to www.lindbohanon.org.

Is your home ready for winter? LBNA Home Improvement Loan Program can help!

The Lind-Bohanon Neighborhood Association through the Neighborhood Revitalization Program (NRP) funding provides several different loans for residents to take advantage of to help improve their properties. Every repaid loan allows LBNA to consider doing more in our community like youth programs, host community events, produce and distribute monthly newsletters.

This program offers residents attractive home loans at below market rates! For more information contact Brenda Yaritz, Center for Energy and Environment, 612-335-5891. Your vote counts! Vote on November 6!

Wanna have your say in what happens to you, your family and community? You can — your vote counts. There are all kinds of people running for government offices this year — and there are two very important ballot questions for you to vote on. To simplify things for folks who live in the Camden area we've included the first page of your sample ballot so you know what to expect when you go to your voting place.

Election Day is Tuesday, November 6. Polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. If you are unsure where to vote, enter your home address into the tools at mnvotes.org to find your polling place.

If you aren't sure if you're a registered voter, you can use the Minnesota Voter Registration Lookup on the Secretary of State's website to confirm you are registered. Enter your name, birthday and address and the site will quickly tell you whether you are registered at their current address.

If you are not registered to vote or need to update your registration info, you may do so at your local polling location on Election Day as long as you can provide proof of residence. Bring one of the following with your current name and address to verify your residence in the precinct: A valid Minnesota driver's license, learner's permit, Minnesota ID card, or receipt for any of these; a valid student ID card including your photo; a Tribal ID card that contains your picture and signature; a valid registration in the same precinct under a different name or address; a notice of late registration sent to you by your county auditor or city clerk; a voter registered in the same precinct as you who can confirm your address with a signed oath; an employee of the residential facility where you live who can confirm your address with a signed oath; and/or a photo ID and a current utility bill with your current name and address.

For info about registering and voting in Minneapolis visit minneapolismn.gov/elections or call Minneapolis 311. Visit the Secretary of State's website for information regarding the two ballot initiatives: www.sos.state.mn.us.

The Minneapolis Park and Recreation Board (MPRB) is making good progress on development of construction documents for the pool and pool facility at Webber Park. The project is expected to go out for bid in February/March to allow for spring construction.

You may be wondering why construction has not yet begun on the parking lot. Though it was put out for bid and several bids were received, they were all, unfortunately, higher than expected. This is not uncommon, especially in late summer and fall. The MPRB anticipates that bids for the parking lot will be more consistent with estimates if included with the pool and pool facility bidding process in February/March. Winter/spring can be a more favorable time for bidding, and we may achieve some economy of scale as well.

In light of the revised bidding strategy, MPRB planning staff has worked with recreation staff to determine how best to time construction of the parking lot to coordinate with park programming. While construction of the pool and pool facility will begin first thing this spring, construction of the parking lot will begin the end of June. This will time construction with seasonal changes in programming, especially the Rec Plus day care program.

Park staff was very eager to get construction moving this fall, but determined that the potential for maximizing project funds takes priority. The MPRB looks forward to celebrating this project with all in 2013. For info visit the Webber Park project page on the MPRB website.

Home Tour wants your home, or your neighbors'

Who in your neighborhood recently remodeled their home and might like to show it off? Or a host with the most, in a classic home? The 2013 Minneapolis & Saint Paul Home Tour is already looking for homeowners and home improvement professionals to feature on the late-April tour. Nominations/applications are due Tuesday, January 15, and early submissions are encouraged. It's the Tour's 26th year, and it will be held April 27 and 28, 2013.

"People attending the tour are looking for ideas on how to remodel rooms or expand their homes," said Tour coordinator Margo Ashmore. They like to visit areas where they can see a handful of homes close to each other and enjoy talking with homeowners. "Homeowners on the tour enjoy feedback and find it's also a great promotion for their neighborhoods." It is not necessary to have remodeled the whole house. Home improvement professionals often help staff the homes, and homeowners ask family, friends and neighborhood advocates to contribute a time hosting. "A good support network makes it fun. It's a great incentive to finish up the last few little projects," Ashmore said. "Recruit help at fall and winter gatherings, and identify clusters of homes to call special attention."

The tour encourages homeowners to improve existing homes, and to complement the neighborhood if they build new. For info contact Tour Coordinator Margo Ashmore at 612-867-4874 or mfashmore@aol.com. Download the application at www.MSPHomeTour.com under "submit a home."

The tour involves commercial, city government, and agency sponsors in a celebration of city living. Homes must be within the city limits of Minneapolis or Saint Paul.

Improvements at Ryan Lake—coming soon Community Meeting—November 14

ViNA has been working with the City of Minneapolis and promising Victory residents improvements to the shoreline of Ryan Lake for nearly eight years. Working with the City of Minneapolis Public Works has been challenging and has yielded little, but with the recent action of the City to lease the site to the Minneapolis Park and Recreation Board we are likely to see some improvements made in 2013. After several meetings with MPRB Associate Superintendent of Planning, Bruce Chamberlain, he has agreed to identify funding in the MPRB 2013 budget to match the ViNA funds. ViNA has also agreed to provide volunteer labor and community engagement for the project so there will be a community meeting on Wednesday, November 14 at 7 p.m. at The Warren, 4400 Osseo Road, for residents to learn more about the project and provide input to several design concepts for a trail and a plaza.

Leaves in street = pollution in river When you are cleaning the gutters on the roof—think about the gutters in the street. The gutters in the street are connected to the storm sewer system, which empties runoff into our creeks, lakes and the river. Leaves and debris which accumulate in the street and wash into the storm system are major contributors to pollution in our lakes and rivers. Leaves and nutrients over-fertilize lake water and encourage harmful aquatic plants and algae to thrive. The result is murky water that isn't good for swimming and fishing, and harms wildlife.

When raking leaves on your lawn and cleaning leaves from your gutters remember to pick up those in the street Above all, Do not rake your leaves into the street! City Ordinance prohibits raking leaves into the street. Bag them in compostable bags and leave them out on your garbage pickup day. The City will pick up yard waste through the week of November 12. Keep your mind on the gutter!

consulting), as well as additional info about utility impacts, storm water impacts, etc. If possible, the steering committee will use the info from the meeting to make a recommendation for a preferred route. (The steering committee is made up of community residents as well as technical experts from the city, county and other organizations.)

The steering committee will also be advising on an outreach plan between now and the second community meeting. They plan to do some extensive outreach to different cultural groups who were not well represented at the open house, as well as direct outreach to households on the preferred greenway route. In the meantime, the consultant will develop a concept plan including suggested designs along the preferred route. They will have a second community meeting sometime between December and February to present these concept plans. This project is a response to community interest in a greenway and is supported by the City of Minneapolis through the Statewide Health Improvement Program, funded by the Minnesota Department of Health. This is part of a larger Minneapolis initiative called Healthy Living Minneapolis. Previous efforts in North Minneapolis include Venture North Bike Walk & Coffee, the Nice Ride expansion, the installation of bike and pedestrian wayfinding signs, and the Bike Walk Move campaign. The City has also continued to improve the bike infrastructure in North Minneapolis by adding the greenway on 37th Ave., and bike lanes on Emerson and Fremont last year, and by maintaining bike lanes on Plymouth, 26th and Lowry.

-Congressman Keith Ellison
